Design a site like this with WordPress.com Get started

The Promise of Sublime Words by Ewa Doroszenko

Posted on January 5, 2017 by fotoinfinitum

Sent to us by Ewa Doroszenko, a visual artist based in Warsaw, Poland. Her project The Promise of Sublime Words started out as a means to show Ewa's favorite statues she had learned about during her art history doctoral studies. Her time studying brought her face to face with many books on the Classical era's sculptures.

Cutting out fragments of the images, Ewa incorporated platforms, and made small compositions of the elegant Greek gods. The ancient philosophers and leaders are treated like paper figures in Ewa's distorted views.

Once Ewa finished her compositions, she would reshoot them and begin printing on a larger scale than the original to create a hybrid of photo sculpture works. Take a look below:

For more images from this series, view The Promise of Sublime Words in its entirety here, and be sure to follow Ewa on Instagram.

Share this:
Like
Reblog Like 9 bloggers like this.

Screen Printed Self Portraits of Photographer Zohra Opoku
February 6, 2017
In "Photographers"

At the Races with a Punk Road
June 9, 2015
In "Photographers"

Creating the Luminous Work of Vi Wei
December 3, 2016
In "Interviews"

Posted in Photographers Tagged abstract, behind the lens, collage, contemporary, Ewa Doroszenko, Foto Infinitum, photography, sculpture, Submissions, Women in Photography

Previous Post
6 Photo Books to End Your Year With

Next Post
Screen Printed Self Portraits of Photographer Zohra Opoku

Leave a comment

Write a comment...

Comment

Top Posts & Pages

Follow Foto Infinitum

Enter your email address to follow Foto Infinitum and receive notifications of new interviews and features with inspiring photographers by email.

Email Address

Follow

Follow FOTO INFINITUM

Categories

Exhibitions & Shows
Interviews
Photographers
Print Giveaways
Tips & Resources
Zines & Photo Books

Blog at WordPress.com.